

Plagiarism Detection

EJPSS is entirely devoted to sustaining the highest academic and ethical standards. Suppose it is discovered that an article violates any of the universal publication ethics and conducts plagiarism, violation of copyright laws, or double submission. In that case, the evaluation process is stopped, and the article is returned to the author. The author will be prohibited from submitting articles to the journal. All submitted articles will be screened with plagiarism screening software before the peer review. The maximum acceptable similarity rate is 10%.
